The graph illustrates the demographic trend of the population aged 65 and over in the United Kingdom. The population remains relatively stable around 2300 until the early 1960s, after which it begins a steady decline. A sharp drop is visible around 1965, followed by a period of relative stability around 1800 until the late 1970s. The population then declines more rapidly, reaching approximately 1000 by 2020.
